Xii human nature remains corrupt even after the person has been justified temporal evils fall upon corrupt nature not upon the justified person the true cause of these evils lies in the corruption of nature itself god merely permits them 240

Xiii the permission of temporal evils which are common to good and bad alike is not merely an act of justice but also an effect of goodness for they serve as a wholesome remedy to the moral infirmities common to all men 248

Xiv the power of prayer is a means offered to us by christ for removing all irregularities in the distribution of temporal evil 254

Xv if we consider only the natural law apart from the positive promises of god we cannot prove that temporal evil must be distributed in accordance with virtue and with vice 258

Xvi observation shows that temporal good has a continual tendency to be united with virtue and temporal evil generally speaking to follow vice 268
